TH E Publisher of the Treatise, which I have undertaken to answer, saith, That he forbears to Declare to the World the Name of that Worthy Person, unto whom we are beholden for that elaborate Composure; only that it hath for its Author, a Learned and Pious Minister. How Pious or Learned the Author of the Book may be, I am no more concern'd to know, than I am who the Author is, whom the Publisher hath thought fit to commend as such; and having so done, to conceal. But he is not (as far as I conceive) the more Learned or Pious for Writing this Book: Not the more Learned; for by all the Helps he professes to have had from Didoclavius, &c. he is guilty of many gross and palpable Mistakes: And not the more Pious, because of the Uncharitable Reflections and Inferences he every where makes. For would any Man of a truly Christian Temper alledge these Things now against the Common-Prayer, which were alter'd or expunged above Thirty Years before he published his Brief Discourse? Or charge us with violating the Word of God, because we change the Word Sabbath for the Seventh Day ; or say that we sacrilegiously steal from it, because Hallelujah, or Praise to the Lord, is sometimes left out in the Reading of Psalms, or that we equal the Apocrypha and set it up above the Canonical Scriptures, because it's read on the Highest Holy-day (as he saith, but not very truly) though the Articles of our Church expressly declare them to be only of humane Composition. Suppose now should treat this Author after the same manner and whereas he professes to have compared our Liturgy with the Missal, &c. I should take the Advantages given in his Book, to shew, that notwithstanding this, he had never read them. I am certain, I could much more easily, and more Charitably do it, as he make good his above-said Charge. For would any one conversant in the Missal, Breviary and Ritual of the Church of Rome, have said (as he doth, p. 5.) That Beza notes, that in the Roman Liturgy, Miserere are taught to cry, Jesu miserere mei, no less than ten times one after another? For what need he quote Beza for that which he has (as he saith) read himself; and which after all, Beza mistook, and he with Beza; or rather he mistook Beza in; since the Jesu miserere thus repeated, is not in the Missal, &c. but in private Offices of that Church. Who again, that had been conversant in our Liturgy, would have said, as the Author does, Some have observ'd, that of 172 Apocryphal Chapters, but 38 are omitted? For what need he to be beholden to another's Observation, for what he that had thus read the Liturgy must have under his own Eye? So easy is it to repay him in his own Coin, if we will reflect and infer after his Way.

It's a shrewd Sign this Author was hard put to
to make good his Charge against the Liturgy, to prove his Point, That it's unlawful to be present at the Common-Prayer Worship.

And after all, it's of little Service to our Author, and those of his Communion, to make such exceptions as he has done; for if all things were alter'd, and remov'd that he objects against, they of his Way would be no nearer to us than they are, if the things stand at present; as long we are a National Church, and have a Liturgy; and whilst they continue Independent and Congregational, and are against the Use of any Forms, ever such as are Scriptural (as the Lor'ds Prayer and Devotional Dialogue; &c.) nay, against reading the Scripture in their Publick Congregations.

That Indeed he had dealt more sincerely, if he had acquainted his Reader, That they hold it unlawful to communicate with us, because we are a National Church; and that they don't join in the Common-Prayer Worship, because it's a Form, and all Forms are in his Opinion unlawful. This indeed, if struck at the Root of all; but this he knew was not so easily prov'd, nor would look so popularly, if they cry out Heathenism, Judaism and Popery, which he charges our Service-Book with. This indeed, will rouse the Multitude; and it's no wonder when possess'd with this Representation of our Worship, that the deluded People broke into the Church, Erected at Boston for the Worship of God, according to the Church of England, to search for the Images they supposed we worship'd. The Time was when the Antinomians from among themselves, treated them in the like Way and call'd them * Legal Preachers, Popish Factors, Scribes, and Opposers of Christ. And they may remember, what had like to have been the Effect of it, if they had not taken up with their Adversaries call'd a Bloody Tenet: And truly we had reason to fear it, if there had not been a Superior Authority to over-rule it.

But I shall forbear to recriminate, and shall leave the rest to the Book, where I have let nothing escape that requires an Answer; and I hope, have given a sufficient Answer to it, and in the issue have prov'd, that (as far as his Exceptions go) they have no reason to forbear being present at, or joining in the Commor-Prayer Book Worship; which is the Matter of the First Question: Nor that it's unlawful to take an Oath by Laying the Hand upon the Bible; which is the Matter of the Second.

A BRIEF DISCOURSE
Concerning the Lawfulness of Worshipping GOD
BY THE COMMON-PRAYER.

THE First Question proposed by the Author, is,

Q. 1. What are the Reasons why you judge it unlawful to be present at, or to partake the Common-Prayer Worship?

The Reasons he gives are four, taken,

1. From the Original of the Common-Prayer-Book, which, saith he, with the Ceremonies and Worship prescribed therein, I find to be in a great measure Popish and Heathenish.

2. From the Matter of the Common-Prayer-Book.

3. Because Publick Liturgies of humane Composition, are Innovation and Deviation from Primitive Purity.

4. In this Age of Light, it would be a great Apostacy the least to countenance or comply with the Common-Prayer Worship.

These are the Reasons he advances, and by which he endeavours to justify their continuance in a Separation from the Church of England, and the Worship therein Administred.

I shall take the Liberty to examine these Particulars.

2 Of the Lawfulness of Worshipping God

For the clearer discoursing upon which, I shall divide what I have to say, into so many Chapters, viz.

1. Of the Original of the Common-Prayer, or English Liturgy.
2. Of the Matter of it.
3. Of the Original of Liturgies.
4. Of Worship by a Liturgy.

C H A P. I.

Of the Original of the English Liturgy.

OUR Author saith, That the Common-Prayer Book, with the Ceremonies and Worship prescribed therein, are in a great measure Popish and Heathenish, is taken out of the Pope's Mass-Book; and therefore it is unlawful to joyn with it.

This will be resolved into two Questions.

Q. 1. Whether the Common-Prayer be taken out of the Mass-Book, and be Popish and Heathenish?

Q. 2. Whether the being taken out of the Mass-Book, makes it unlawful to be used or joyned with it, though it be good and lawful in it self?

Q. 1. Whether the Common-Prayer is taken out of the Mass-Book? As our Author takes care to present it, one would think there is little of the Mass-Book Service left out in ours. The Common-Prayer, saith he, is in a great measure Popish-----is taken out of the Pope's Mass-Book-----it cannot be denied it's derived from thence, p. 1. There is very little in the English Liturgy which is not to be found in the other, p. 2. This is matter of Fact, and so is not to be determined by Authority. He himself makes a fair Proposal which I shall accept of, viz. Let such as have any difficulty about this matter compare the Popish Missal, &c. with the English Liturgy, and they will be convinced: what? That he had never read and compared them; or is guilty of a notorious Abuse which puts upon his ignorant Reader, that after he pretends to have read and compared, shall assert so gross a Falshood, and say, There is very little in the English that is not to be found in the other.

For,

1. There is little comparatively in the English, which is to be found in the Roman Liturgy, and far more is left out, than ever was taken thence. This is indeed directly contrary to what he affirms, and yet let any one compare them, and he will be convinced of the truth of it. Take that which is called The Canon of the Mass, or Form of Administring the Eucharist, and there is no Agreement, not one Collect or Prayer the same. Go we to Baptism, there is not one Prayer belonging to that Office that is in ours. And for the Litany, there is not a third part of theirs in ours, and much in ours, which is not in theirs.

2. There is nothing in the Service of the Church of Rome, which makes it the Pope's Missal, and is peculiar to that Church, that is in ours; that is, there is no Popery in our Liturgy. This he is in part forced to acknowledge. There are, saith he, things (as Prayers for the Dead, &c.) in the Roman Liturgy, which are not translated into English. His Et cetera, if branched into Particulars, would be very large, as he could not but know, if he had read and compared them. As for Example, Where are their Crossings, Elevation, and Adoration of the Elements of the Eucharist? Where their Solitary Communion, and Communion in one kind? Where their frequent Crossings of themselves, and of the Book? Where their material Crosses, and the Adoration of them? Where their Prayers for the Dead? Where their Intercessors, the Virgin Mary and Saints, that are to be found in the Canon of the Mass? Where are so many Exorcisms in Baptism, the Puffs they blow upon the Infant's face, their Conjurament of Salt, for the wholesom Sacrament to the driving away of Devils, which is put into the Mouth of the Infant, as a Propitiation unto Eternal Life? Where the Spittle with which the Ears and Nostrils of the Infants are touched with an Ephphata, be opened? Where the Oyl of Salvation, (as it's call'd) wherewith the Priest anoints the Child's Breast and Shoulders in form of a Cross? Where the Chrism or Oyntment wherewith he anoints the Crown of the Head in figure of a Cross? Where the change of Garments, their Purple and White Robe, that the Child is to carry unspotted before the Tribunal of our Lord? Where the lighted Candle put into the Child's Hand, that when our Lord shall come to the Wedding, he may meet him? Where the many Crossings of the Head before Baptism, and of the Eyes, Ears, Nostrils, Breast, Shoulders, Mouth, &c. to be found in their Ritual and Pastoral? Lastly, To go no farther, Where are the O holy Mary, Mother of God, &c. pray for us? Where are the Angels and Arch-angels, the Patriarchs and Prophets, the Apostles and Evangelists; the Martyrs, Popes, and Confessors, the Priests and Levites, the Monks and Hermits, the Virgins and Widows, the Forty seven Saints in particular, and all Saints in general, that are called upon in the Litany, Pray for us? And if nothing that is truly Popish be to be found in our Liturgy, we have far reason to deny that it's taken out of the Mass-Book, and is derived from thence.

3. I add, That our Service is so far from being taken out of the Missal, that whatsoever in it is the same with the Office in the Church of Rome, is mostly taken out of the Ancient Offices of the Christian Church. And because every one cannot compare it, I will produce an Impartial Authority for this. Thus saith Mr. Ball, a Nonconformist of great Note in the last Age: [a] The English Liturgy, saith he, is not a Collection out of the Mass-Book, but a residue of the Liturgy, which heretofore had been stained in the Mass-----and is not a Translation of the Mass, but a Restitution of the Ancient Liturgies. So the Ministers of Old England, in a Letter to the Ministers

[a] Trial of the Grounds of Separ. c. 8. p. 15

New England. wrote Anno 1637. It's no hard task to know, that our Service-Book was reformed in most things according to the purest Liturgies, which were in use long before the Mass was heard of in the World, p. 2.

To these I will add one more, for the Character our Author gives him, viz. Bishop Jewel (whom he calls That great Light in the English Church, p.
 .) Who saith, We are come as near as possibly we could to the Church of the Apostles, and of the old Ca-tholick Bishops and Fathers.-----And besides, we have imined not only our Doctrine, but Sacraments also, and forms of our Publick Prayers, after the patern of their Rites and Ordinances.

To say the truth, it's a very odd thing to represent our Liturgy as Popish, when those that composed and used the Liturgy, were burnt by the Papists for it, and when to this day neither will the Papist communicate in it, nor with the Church that useth it. Our Author saith, There have been Jesuits and Popish Intelligencers that approved of our Service; and Pope Pius 5th would have ratified it? And is it therefore Popish? The Independent allows the Presbyterian Confession of Faith: And our Author saith, p. 4. It must be acknowledged that such of the Church of England-men, as keep to the XXXIX Articles in matters of Doctrine, are as Orthodox as any Protestants in the world. And is therefore the Independent a Presbyterian, or this Author a Church of England-man? I trow not. All is, that they agree in the Common Principles the other receives, and yet one is no more the other, than if they had no agreement in such Principles. And so it is here, the English Liturgy has nothing, but what is agreeable to the Doctrine of the Gospel, and allowable by the Christian Church; and therefore what the Papists will, or ought to allow; but for all that, we are no more Papists, nor that any more Popish, than the Independent is a Presbyterian, or our Author a Church of England-man. It was not then, because it was Popish, that they approved of our Service, but that it was Christian, and pure in its Order

6 Of the Lawfulness of Worshipping God

der and Composure; neither was it because it was Popish, that the Pope would have ratified it, but because upon any terms he would have prevailed upon Queen Elizabeth to own his Authority, and have regain'd her to their Church.

4. However, I deny not, but that the Compiler of the Liturgy did peruse the Popish Offices, and take as much from thence as was conformable to the Ancient Offices, and was fit to be used; and that the rather, that they might the more easily satisfy doubting or discontented Minds under the Alterations then made, and induce them to comply with them: And this was the meaning of King Edward's Proclamation; A practice very Christian and commendable, and agreeable to the Apostolical prudence which we read of, Acts 15, and 16. 3. 1 Cor. 9. 19. &c. And which the Nation soon felt the happy effects of, when by this excellent conduct it became, generally speaking, Reformed. But yet after all, so little was taken out of the Mass-Book, and other Offices of the Romish Church, that they differed more than they agreed in, and more was left than taken out of them.

But our Author stays not here, That the English Liturgy, saith he, is originally Heathenish as well as Popish, is manifest: First, In that the Pope's Liturgy from whence ours is derived, is so. The principal parts of the Mass-Book were borrowed from Idolatrous Pagans. They came from Numa Pompilius, p. 4.

Answ. It has been sufficiently made out by Protestants, that there is great affinity and agreement between the Heathenish and Popish Rites; but our Author does an Injury to the Argument, when affirming, that the Principal Parts of the Mass-Book, were borrowed from Idolatrous Pagans; he goes no further than Vestments, Holy water and Incense, as if these were the Principal Parts of the Mass-Book, and the chief things that That agreed in with the Idolatry of the Heathens.

But

But suppose there be this conformity between the Papist and the Pagan; what is that to us, if we agree with neither? But that he attempts to prove.

For though he cannot find Incense and Holy water and Et cetera among us; yet he saith, Secondly, What vain Repetitions does the Common-Prayer Book abound with? In one Service the Worshippers must repeat these words, Good Lord deliver us, Eight times over. And We beseech thee to hear us, Twenty times over. The Gloria Patri is to be repeated Ten times in the same Morning or Evening Service.. That the Heathens were wont to worship their Idols after the same manner, is clear from Matth. 7, &c. And Beza notes, That the Roman Liturgy does abound with them, wherein Men are taught to cry, Jesu, Jesu, miserere mei, no less than Ten times after another.

I Answer,

1. We grant, that there may be such things as vain Repetitions in Prayers, and other Divine Offices; for that is a Fault our Saviour charges on the Heathens: And what we, as well as our Author, charge on the Church of Rome; and is also frequently charged by those that use and plead for Forms, on those that use extemporary Prayers.

2. We yet do maintain, That there are such Repetitions in Divine Worship, as are not vain, that are neither Heathenish nor Popish. Such do we read of in the Old Testament, as Psalms 57. 1. 75. 1. 103. 1, 2, 22. 107. 8, 15, 21, 31. 136. throughout.

And thus our Saviour repeated the same Words twice in his Agony in the Garden, Mat. 26. 44. and once on the Cross, Mat. 27. 46. And consequently Repetitions are no more condemned by our Saviour in Mat. 6. and 7. than all long Prayers are, Mat. 23. 14. So that the Vanity of Repetitions does not consist in using the same Words eight times, or twenty times in Prayer. For do we repeat in our Service, Good Lord deliver us, eight times? And Glory be to the Father, &c. ten times? And, We beseech thee to hear us, Good Lord, twenty times? So we find, that the Jewish Church not only only had their thrice, and their four times, but their twenty seven times, as it is in every Verse of Psalm 136. His Mercy endureth for ever; which Psalm was most used on solemn Occasions, as we may find it, 2 Chron. 5. 13. 7. 3, 6. 20. 21. Ezra 3. 11. Jer. 33. 11. So that we may more truly say of the Church of God amongst the Jews, than he do of the Heathens, and their Idols, that they were wont to Worship God just after the same manner, with Repetitions in their Service, as we.

3. We are to consider wherein the Vanity of Repetitions consists, so as to be after the manner of the Heathens. This admits great Variety, and just Bounds cannot easily be set; so that it's not to be exactly said, Here the vain Repetitions begin, here they end. But they are such,

(1.) When they that use them, think that they shall be heard for their much speaking, as our Saviour saith, the Heathens did: Thus the Priests of Baal did, crying out, O Baal bear us, from Morning till Noon; and accordingly Elijah upbraids them 1 Kings 18. 26, 27.

(2.) When it is nothing but Tautology, viz. Repetition of the same words without new Matter or of the same matter, but in differing words; when there are words only without matter or sense. Such were the Verses of Battus the babbling Poet. Such were the Hymns used often by the Heathens in the worship of their Gods. Such are the Jesu, Jesus, &c. without Intermission, sometimes used in the Roman Church.

But when there are distinct Petitions, it's as lawful to close each, [with We beseech thee to hear us, O Lord] as it is to say Amen, which we find to follow every particular Petition, and was distinctly repeated for twelve times together after that manner, Deut. 27. 15.

(3.) Vain Repetitions, are when the words are thought sufficient, though the Heart be not with them; but this may be common to any, and is the fault of the Person, not of the Prayer. So that thou though there are Repetitions in our Service, yet they are neither Heathenish, Popish, nor vain.

Thirdly, he saith, Some of the most Learned Patrons of Liturgies produce it as an Argument for them, that the Heathens made use of Forms in their Idolatrous worship, p. 5. And so he makes this the difference between the Heathens and Christians, that the first used Forms, but the last prayed without them. As for the practice of the Christians, we shall have occasion to speak of it under another Head; neither shall I trouble my self with the Opinion of those Learned Patrons of Liturgies, he speaks of: But I shall take this Argument as it lies before us, which is, That our Liturgy is heathenish, because we use Forms as they did. He might as well have said, Our Liturgy is heathenish, because we use words as they did; since it's no more heathenish to use Forms than Words. If they had the use of Forms, it rather shews the sense that Mankind generally have of this matter; and that there cannot be too great a care taken of our demeanour in Divine Worship, according to the Direction of the Wise-man, Eccl. 5. 2. Be not rash with thy mouth, &c. for God is in Heaven, &c. therefore let thy words be few, and well considered. But if the Heathens had Forms, so had the Jews, so had Christians, as I shall shew; and so Forms no more make our Worship heathenish than Jewish. In conclusion, our Liturgy must needs be heathenish without Heathenism, and popish without Popery in it.

But supposing, that our Liturgy was (as he would have it) taken out of the Mass-Book; yet,

Q. 2. Will the being taken out of the Mass-Book, make that Worship, which is otherwise good and lawful, to become unlawful to be used, or joyned with?

This he affirms, and offers to prove after this manner:

It's a known Maxim (saith he) Omnis honor Idoli est Idolatria: He that shall put any respect upon an Idol, cannot be clear of the Sin of Idolatry; but the Mass-Book is an Idol: And he that useth a Prayer, or joyns with a

10 Of the Lawfulness of Worshipping God

Prayer taken out of that Book, thereby puts an honour upon an Idol-----How then can we joyn in Prayer taken out of the idolatrous Mass-Book, and offer them to the Holy God?

In this there are three Things contained.

1. That the Mass-Book is an Idol.
2. That to take a Prayer, or joyn with a Prayer taken out of the Mass-Book, is a respect to an Idol, and is Idolatry.
3. That it's unlawful to joyn with a Prayer taken out of the Mass-Book.

1. The Mass-Book is an Idol. This we may justly question, because an Idol is the Representation of some Divine or beatified Object, and that is as such propounded and set up for Adoration; such are the Images of God and our Saviour, of Angels and Saints in the Church of Rome. But in this sense the Mass-Book is no Idol: There is no Prototype or Object it represents, nor is any such Adoration paid to it, as is paid to an Image, or a Crucifix. We grant as well as he, that the Mass-Book is idolatrous, as it contains some things that are so, and is used in idolatrous Worship: But it no more follows from thence that it is an Idol, than that the Incense, Holy water or Vestments are Idols, which are used when they say Mass. But supposing the Mass-Book for once to be an Idol, that we may proceed to the next Question, viz.

2. Whether the taking a Prayer out of the Mass-Book, be such a respect to it, as makes the Prayer to be idolatrous? To this I answer, That the Prayers taken out of the Mass-Book, and inserted in our Liturgy, are so far from being a respect, that it is a disrespect to it. For at the same time that some Prayers were taken out, those were rejected that were left behind, for the gross Corruptions that were in them; and by so doing, the Reformers as much testified to all the world their abhorrence of it, as the emptying the infected House of the Goods and Utensils not infected by the Leprosy, and the forsaking it, was a plain declaration of its Pollution. So that if Prayers taken from thence are good, they giving them when taken thence, is no Idolatry; and Communion in them no Sin, and no more unlawful than it was to use the Vessels that were carried out of the infected House.

3. But, saith he, it is unlawful to joyn with a Prayer taken out of the idolatrous Mass-Book. This is the main Question, viz.

Q. Whether that which has been us'd in idolatrous Worship, may if otherwise good and lawful, be used where the Worship is not idolatrous?

This he denies, and for it offers these Reasons.

1. We ought not to name an Idol, but with detestation; much less may we offer it as Worship to God. Psal. 16. 4. Exod. 23. 13. Hos. 2. 16. 17, P. 4.

2. It was Paul's Judgment, that Meat once offer'd to Idols, should not be made use of, 1-Cor. 10. 28. Therefore a Service-Book offer'd to Idols ought not to be used. For there is a parity of Reason.

3. God hath strictly prohibited his People all symbolizing with the Heathen in civil usages, because he would not have them imitate the Heathen, Levit. 19. 19, 27. -----especially in matters referring to the Worship of God. Hence they were prohibited going up by steps to the Altar, Exod. 20. 24, 26. to plant a grove near the Altar, Deut. 16. 31. And to worship to the East, Ezek. 16.

Before I proceed to consider these Arguments in particular, I shall state the Case it self; for resolving of which we may observe:

1. That there are things idolatrous in their own nature, or made so by a standing positive Law, and are always the same. Such is the Picture of God, and worshipping by Images.

2. There are things that have been customarily appropriated to idolatrous Worship, and the use of which in common estimation, hath been accounted idolatrous. Such was the offering Incense among the Heathens; and therefore the primitive Christians used it, as an acknowledgment of their Worship; the Thurificati that offer'd incense to the Idol, for avoiding persecution, were reputed Idolaters.

12 Of the Lawfulness of Worshipping God

3. There are other things that are used as well in true as idolatrous Worship, and are lawful in themselves; such as Time, Place, Habit, Posture.

The first is always unlawful, and makes Worship idolatrous.

The second is not to be used where it has been thus appropriated, and thus accounted, during such an opinion of them.

So that it's the last of these that the whole turns upon; for after all the clamour he makes about Idolatry, and the charge he would fain fasten upon us, he can produce nothing that is idolatrous amongst us, no Images, no prayers to Saints, nor so much as any thing appropriated, or in common estimation so accounted; no incensings of Books or Images, no sprinklings of Holy water; but it all amounts to this, that Forms and Repetitions have been us'd by Idolaters; that they had White Garments, and observ'd Holy-days: p. 4, 5, 8. Which are things lawful in themselves (as I shall shew) and cannot be made unlawful by being us'd in idolatrous Worship. For when Idolatry is not in the nature of the thing, but in the use, taking away the Use, and the Idolatry ceaseth; and consequently it may be lawfully used where there is no Idolatry in the Worship, and no Idolatry in the use of it. And if it be not to be used, it's not because it's unlawful in it self to use it, but because it's forbidden by God, as was the case among the Jews; or because of some circumstances that make it inconvenient and dangerous. Thus it was lawful to eat that Meat which had been offer'd to Idols, when it was afterward expos'd to sale in the Shambles, or set up the Table at an Entertainment; [a] because it was thereby restor'd to a common use; when yet it was not lawful to sit at Meat in an Idol's Temple, that was to have fellowship in the Idolatry. [b] It is then no more Idolatry to use a White Garment, or a Temple, or observe a Day, or to use a Practice that has been used or observed in idolatrous Worship.

[a] 1 Cor. 10. 25, 27. [b] Ch. 8. 10. Ch. 10. 20

by an idolatrous Church, than it was to eat Meat that had been offer'd to Idols. Purify the Gold, and separate the Dross from it, and the Gold is not the worse for the Dross that was before mingled with it. scrape the Walls, and cast out the infected materials, so that the House be freed from the Leprosy, and it might have been as well inhabited, as if it had ever been infected, Levit. 14. 48. (to make use of former Comparisons, p. 2 & 3.) And take the things lawful from the things unlawful, and they become lawful again, and may be lawfully used.

But, saith he, The Rubbish of the leprous House was to be cast into an unclean place: And the Leprosy breaks out still; therefore we may have no Communion with it, p. 3.

But surely it's the same thing if we leave the House that is infected, as it is to carry away the Rubbish into an unclean place; else why doth he talk of leaving the Communion for the sake of the Leprosy of Idolatry? We grant the Church we left to be idolatrous, there the Leprosy is; and therefore we left it; but we left the Idolatry with the Church, and let him prove there is any of the Leprosy of Idolatry in what we have taken out of it, and then he would say somewhat to the purpose; but that he is far from.

Let us however consider his Arguments relating to the general part. First, We ought, saith he, not to name an Idol but with detestation, much less offer it as Worship to God.

I answer, (1.) The Naming there forbidden, is the naming an Idol with respect; and indeed the addressing any Worship to it. So Psal. 16. 4. Their sorrows shall be multiplied that hasten after another God; their drink-offering of Blood will I not offer, nor take up their Name into my Lips: That is, they might not name them by way of Worship, nor offer Sacrifice to them.

(2.) Where is there such a naming of an Idol amongst us? what respect do we give to his Idol the Mass-Book? what Saint do we adore? But, saith he, the Prayers are taken out of the idolatrous Mass-Book. But what then, if there be nothing of their Idolatry in the Prayers that are taken thence; when such are taken taken thence, they are no more idolatrous than before they were taken into the Miss-Book.

2d. He saith, It was Paul's Judgment, that meat offered to Idols should not be made use of, 1 Cor. 10. 28. Therefore a Service-Book offered to Idols ought not to be used. For there is a parity of Reason.

I conceive he is much mistaken in the account he gives of the Apostle's Judgment, who is so far from maintaining Meat offered to Idols to be unlawful, that he makes it a thing indifferent, when not in the Idol Temple (as before;) and what a Person may with a safe conscience eat of without scruple, unless it be with respect to another's conscience that is thereby offended, as the Apostle determines it, v. 28, 29. Now if Meat offered to Idols might be eaten of, then a Service-Book that has been used in idolatrous Worship may be lawfully used (when the things contained in it are otherwise lawful and good.) For there is a parity of Reason, as he argues.

3d. He saith, God hath prohibited his People all symbolizing with Heathen, &c.

We grant that God did prohibit the Jews all symbolizing and agreement with the Heathens in their Idolatry. That is not the Question. But,

1. Whether an agreement with Idolaters in what was once used by them in Idolatry, becomes an Idolatry, or be unlawful because it hath been so used?

2. Or, whether what was forbidden to the Jews, is forbidden to all People; And to Christians as well as they?

These we deny.

The first we deny as to the Jews, that every thing used in idolatrous Service was unlawful to them; for he saith, The Priests of Isis used to wear Linnen Surplices, p. 9 and yet such Linnen Garments were the Priests and Levites to officiate in. [a] So Circumcision was used among the Egyptians and other Nations, and yet continued to be used among the Jews.

[a] Leviticus. 16. 4, 32.

Again, We deny that what was in that kind forbidden to the Jews, was forbidden and unlawful to all. For,

1st. A great part of what they were forbidden, was with respect to the People that before inhabited the Land; with whom they were to make no Covenant, but were utterly to destroy them, their Altars, Images and Groves, &c. Exod. 23. 32, 33. and 34. 12. Deut. 7. 2, 3, 5.

2^d. They were a People very prone to Idolatry, and so were often tied up by strict Restraints and Penalties, from such things as had been abused to Idolatry, though not in themselves idolatrous.

3^d. They both came from Egypt, where they had long conversed with idolatrous Service, and afterward bordered upon Nations violently addicted to Idolatry and Sorcery; and in such circumstances there were these Checks laid upon them; and an assimilation to the Customs of such forbidden.

All which was not from the nature of the thing, and because all usages of Idolaters were unlawful, but because of the circumstances of People, Time, and Place: And if so, then we must leave the case of symbolizing, and no longer make it a case of Conscience, but of Prudence and Expediency; and so we are left to judge what is fit to be retained, and what not; what practised, and what not.

Here our Reformers shewed their Prudence and Moderation, by what they chose; when the Ceremonies were few; and what were the Ceremonies of the Ancient Church, rather than the Reformed. When they chose some, that they might not give offence to the Churches of Christ, in other parts of the World that continued to use them; and yet retained no more, that they might not burden their own Communion. When the Offices they selected were agreeable to the Ancientest Offices of the Church.

So that there was no Reformation in any place, where so much Temper was preserved, and where the purity purity

purity of Religion, and the simplicity and solemnity of Divine Service were more regarded: that what was good was retained; what was noxious was purged out, and even what was superfluous was excised.

But this he will not allow.

For, saith he, the use of such a Liturgy doth burden the Papists in their Idolatry, p. 4. So the Liturgy came from Rome, and will perhaps lead thither again, p. 18.

But, 1. How can such a Liturgy burden them in their Idolatry, or lead thither, which has none of the Idolatry in it; and in which the Papists are expressly charged with Idolatry? Vid. Rubrick at Communion.

2. How can this burden them, or lead thither, which has been the means of banishing and keeping their Idolatry out of the Kingdom?

3. How can this burden them, or lead thither, when the Papists agree with our Author, That it is unlawful to be present at, or partake in the Communion Prayer Worship, and are excommunicated if they do?

4. How can this burden them, or lead thither, when there is nothing that the Papists more labour to persuade the People with prejudices against, than the Liturgy of our Church?

But he adds, p. 4. The Jews themselves are scandalized by the Liturgy. It's a Celebrated Saying among them, That the Christians have their Jephilleth from Armillus; that is, their Prayer-Books from Antichrist.

At what are the Jews scandalized? is it that they have a Liturgy? So have they themselves had in latter Ages at least. And so our Author himself saith, p. 13. That he had seen Liturgies written in the Hebrew Tongue.

Is it that we receive our Prayer-Book from Antichrist? Yes, saith he; and for this quotes a Celebrated Saying, of theirs. But is this the truth of their saying so? They say, it seems, that Christians have received their Prayers from Antichrist.

but I hope that there are many Christians in the World, that have Prayer-Books, which they never received from the Antichrist he speaks of: So the Greeks and Abyssins, &c. The whole is at least a sorry Mistake, and which, for ought I see, he understands no more than we do his Tephilleth. The case is plainly thus; That the Rabbins say, that Armillus was to be a Person of prodigious Form, begot of a Marble Statue in Rome, and was to be the last Enemy of the Jews, and the Leader of the Christian Forces against them; that he should kill Messias Ephraim, and at last be killed by Messias Ben David. That he should give Tephilleth תפלה and a Law to the Christians, which he and they set up in opposition to the Law of Moses. So that we see that his Tephilleth is the Law as well as the Prayers of Christians; and they make Armillus to be toward the end of the World, the last Enemy of the Jews; and how could our Liturgy, or the Liturgies now used by Christians, be the Prayers received from Armillus, when Armillus is yet to come, according to the Rabbinical Notion? If the Reader pleases he may have a fuller account of this Jewish Garagantua in Buxtorf's Lexicon, Chald. Talmud. Rabbin; for I am weary of this trifling and unintelligible Jargon.

CHAP. II.

Of the Matter of the Common-Prayer-Book.

BEFORE I proceed to the particular Consideration of his Objections relating to this Head; let me observe, That if we should grant, what he finds fault with, to be blame-worthy, yet it's not to the purpose; and the Point he proposed, which is to give Reasons why he judges it unlawful ful to be present at, or partake in the Common-Prayer Worship.

18 Of the Lawfulness of Worshipping God

I say, it is not to the purpose ; and that for these Reasons. For,

1. There may be many things, that may be given as a reason against Ministerial Conformity, which will not be a reason against Communion with the Church; since there are those things required to the one, that are not required to the other. Such is the Surplice, the Office for Burying the Dead, Marrying, p.8. &c. which belong to the Minister, and not to the People: And therefore though it should be unlawful to wear a Surplice, or use these Offices, yet since Lay-Communion is not concern'd in them, they are no reason for Separation.

2. Many of his Objections are only directed against the occasional Offices, and so can be no reason against constant Communion in the Daily Office, or in those Offices, in which they do not occur. As supposing what he alledgeth out of the Office of Burial, Marriage, Baptism, &c. to be true and sufficient, yet though they may be a reason against being present at the Offices of Burial, Baptism, and Marriage, they are no reason against Communion where those Offices are not concerned.

3. Things inconvenient, if not unlawful, are no reason for a Separation, because then there could be no Communion with any Church, since no Church is without them: And if we should grant the reading of worse Translation of Scripture, and the Apocrypha, in the Church, to be things of that nature; yet it will be hard to shew them to be unlawful in themselves, and to make it necessary to withdraw from the Church where they are used.

If these things be considered, most of what he has said will be prevented; but that I may not seem to avoid any thing, I shall take notice of the Particulars as they lie in order. And his Arguments taken from the Matter of the Service-Book, are

1. Some things appointed therein are, in the judgment of sober and judicious Persons, extremely ridiculous. As how

First, saith he, How many odd and senseless Translations of the Holy Scripture have been found therein? It's well he said, have been found; for he is fain to draw all his Inferences of that kind, but one, from the Service-Book, as it stood before the last revival, and that is Psal. 58. 9. Or ever their pots be made hot with thorns, so let indignation vex them, as a thing that is raw. At which he triumphs, What nonsense is this! Now I do not think that to be Nonsense which is not soon understood; for then what will he make of the Hebrew in this Verse, which has several difficulties in it? But I think there is a good account to be given of the sense of this Version; and that is, E're that the Pots are made hot with the Thorns, they shall be severely punished: The being made hot with the Thorns, sets forth the suddenness; and the phrase, Vexing a thing that is raw, denotes the severity of it.

2. His next Instance of things extremely ridiculous, is, that in the Liturgy, the Writings of the Prophets, Acts and Revelations, are called Epistles. If these were formerly, they are not now so called; but of these when read in the place of Epistles, it's said, The Portion of Scripture for the Epistle. That is, the Sections of Scriptures read in that order, are generally Epistles; and so, as it's usual in other cases, (as he grants it 1. 1.) gives the name to all; And as it is not now, never was it called the Epistle of the Prophets, Acts, or Revelations; but the Epistle taken out of Isaiah, &c.

3. He objects against the Responses, Those broken Responses, saith he, and shreds of Prayer, (as Mr. Cartwright calls them) which the Priests and People toss between them like Tennis-balls, seems extremely ridiculous Standers-by. Without doubt this is a venture of it; but I suppose there are Standers-by, that will call by another Name; and instead of Wit, term this frivolity in Conversation, and prophaneness in Religion: Especially if we consider how many Psalms are in Holy Writ, that are penn'd (or supposed at least to be so, by Learned Men) after this way.

20 Of the Lawfulness of Worshipping God

And whatever his Standers-by may think, there are Persons of Piety ancient and modern, that have thought this way very becoming, and of excellent use to quicken Devotion, and excite Attention. What may not be said in any case by such Persons as these, that call this way of Devotion (as he doth) a taking God's Name in vain? And what occasion may others take after the same manner, to treat their long Prayers, that are often nauseous to Standers-by, for their affected length, and tedious enlargements, and forced Repetitions.

2. He objects, The Common-Prayer Book is guilty of violating the sacred Word of God: And here he charges it with no less than obliterating, contradicting, adding to it, and detracting from it; and then concludes, Amongst Men, clipping and corrupting of God's Word is Treason; and certainly it's a dreadful thing to add to or take from the Word of God; Deut. 4. 2. Rev. 22. 19.

And it's certainly a dreadful thing; and wo to them that are guilty.

Here I should have expected a rounder Charge by one that so exactly read the Liturgy, and that would have told the World, that we take whole Chapters from the Word of God, and which have no place in our Kalendar, nor are read publicly in the Church, as I do acknowledge. And surely the omission of one Verse in a Psalm, and Hallelujah in others, be a taking from the Word of God; then much more is the omission of whole Chapters; nay, three whole Books. But he durst not press that so far; for if he had, it would have fallen hard upon such as never have the Scriptures read in their Congregations, though that was a solemn part of Divine Worship in the Churches of God, as the Scripture informs us, Acts 15. 21, &c. And if the Church of Rome is so deservedly blamed for keeping the Scriptures in an unknown tongue, what do they not deserve, that never read them at all in their Congregations? Surely if they had, according to our Saviour's Advice, considered the Beam in their own Eye, they would not have thus magnified the their Brother's Eye. I remember a Question in book of the same kind with our Author's, Whether Protestants [a] do not sin in defrauding the People of the Books and Chapters of Scripture, as well as Papists defrauding them of all? And then what sort of Protestants are they, that with the Church of Rome fraud the People of all, so far as the Publick Service of God is concern'd?

But to return: Before I shall consider his few Instances, by which he would make good his Bloody Charge, I shall premise a few things.

1. That the Instances he offers are, at the worst, Mistranslations, Slips, and Errors, and not chargeable with Perverseness, according to what we charge upon the Church of Rome. For here is no interest to be served: For what is our Church con-cern'd, whether it be read as the Liturgical Translation hath it, The Seventh Day; or as the Common Translation, The Sabbath? Whether as that, they were obedient to his Word; or as this, They rebelled not a- gainst his Word? Whether as that, The rod of the icked cometh not into the lot of the righteous; or as resteth not? Whether, as in that, the Titles of some Psalms and Hallelujahs are omitted; or in this, they are inserted? Surely here is no Interest visible in this, that should incline our Translators of the Psalter to pick out these Texts above others to make bold with.

2. Mistranslations and Errors of this kind, are no sufficient Reason for not using such a Translation, much less for separating from a Church where they are used; for then no Translation could be us'd, or Church communicated with, because no Church without such Translations, and no Translation without such Errors. Thus it was in the Church of the Septuagint Greek Translation was us'd, or

[a] A Survey of the Book of Common-Prayer, An- no, p. 26.

22 Of the Lawfulness of Worshipping God

in publick: Which doth often alter and add to the Original Hebrew; and yet was not only us'd, but quoted by the Divine Writers, even in many places where those Alterations and Additions are. So it alters Heb. 10. 5, 38. 11. 21. Rom. 10. 18. Acts 7. 8. It adds as Luke 3. 36, 37. Acts 7. 14.

Then also must not our common Translation be used, which besides the Mistakes allowed to be in it, does add in many places, and particularly half a Verse, 1 John 2. 23. So it adds the Dates and Subscriptions to the Epistles, Chapters, Verses, and Arguments throughout the whole. And of this kind are all his Instances.

As (1.) He saith, The Common-Prayer-Book translates the Word of God, as sometimes the words of Scripture are obliterated, and others put in their room. Thus in the Catechism they have changed those words in the Fourth Commandment, The Lord blessed the Sabbath-day into the Seventh-day.

Ans. We grant it is so; but it's to be remembered that it's not so in the 20th of Exodus, but in the Liturgy; and if the Liturgy differs from Exodus, it's a difference without a distinction, since the Seventh-day and Sabbath are all one; and if it differs from Exodus, it agrees with the first Institution, Gen. 2. where it's said, God rested on the seventh day, and blessed the seventh day, and sanctified it.

(2.) He saith, Sometimes the Liturgy makes bold directly and in terms to contradict the Scripture; so Psal. 106. 28. it's said they were not rebellious, but the Common Prayer-Book saith, they were not obedient: and so Psal. 125. 3.

A. We grant, That there is a seeming contradiction in words, but not in the meaning of it; for the relative they being undetermined, and indifferently to be applied to Moses and Aaron, or to the Egyptians accordingly is this place to be interpreted; if understood of the former, it's to be read in the common Translation, they were not rebellious; if of the latter it's to be read in the Translation of the Liturgy, they were not obedient: Which last Reading is according the present Reading of the Septuagint, and some other Translations that follow that. And yet that Translation was generally used by the Primitive Christians, and was worse than any ever used by us. As Psal. 125. 3. The rod of the wicked shall not come, &c. that is, so as to the rest there, and so as to tempt them beyond what they are able.

(3.) He saith, Sometimes the Common-Prayer-Book adds to the Scripture: There are three whole Verses added to the fourteenth Psalm. And the Gloria Patri is frequently added to Scripture, as if it were Canonical.

Ans. When he saith, That it is a dreadful thing to add to the Word of God, and so confidently charges our Church with it, we might expect some very criminal Instances to make it good; and when he saith three whole Verses are added, one would think, that this was somewhat invented, and herein inserted by the Church upon some wicked selfish design. But, 1. though we allow, that such Verses are added, yet it is not an Addition to Scripture: for though not found in this place, yet they are in another, viz. Rom. 13. and quoted by the Apostle from other Psalms, &c. 2. It's not the Common-Prayer-Book that adds, but the Translations, which the Common-Prayer followed, Gen. 22. the Greek Septuagint, and Vulgar Latin.

As for the Gloria Patri, I deny that it's added to the Scriptures as Canonical, any more than the Contents of the Chapters, the Chapters and Verses of the Bible, or the Dates of the Epistles are: nay, I deny that it's added at all; for any one, that can read, will see that it's not added in the Psalter, but only re-ferred as the Rubrick directs. And it was for a good end, that this was anciently used in the Orthodox Churches of old, and is continued in ours, viz. in opposition to the Arrians, and Anti-Trinitarians. So the Ecclesiastical Historian Sozomen, l. 26.

(4.) He saith, Sometimes words are sacrilegiously stolen of the Bible. As the last Verse is omitted, Psal. 72. So the scriptural Titles of many Psalms. And I know how often those Words, Praise ye the Lord, are cut out.

He

24. Of the Lawfulness of Worshipping God

He durst not trust his Reader with the things left out, for they would have appear'd of so little consequence, as would have betray'd the weakness of his cause, as well as his own partiality. The Verse omitted, Psal. 72. is, the Prayers of David the Son of Jesse, are ended. The Titles of the Psalms are for the most part such, as are no key to the matter of them, and without which the Psalms are as intire as the Chapters without the Contents: The Clause, Praise ye Lord, in the Hebrew Hallelujah, only left out when it's independent, and has no immediate relation to the preceding or following Verse. And the reason of these Omissions seems to be, because the Psalms being to be read in Parts (according to the ancient Custom in Chrysostom's time as before) or chanted, and so read on without naming the Psalm; the Titles, &c. would have made a breach in that Order. And this was done after the manner of Singing the Psalms in the Temple-Service, in which the Titles, and the Passage, the Prayers of David the Son of Jesse are ended, were to be sure a part: So it is in the Singing Psalms, used by the Ministers as well as us; who may as well be charged with such Omissions as we, seeing they, for the reason above said, use neither the Verse nor Titles. Suppose these Persons are hard put to it, that after such a bloody Charge of violating, adding to, and taking from the Word of God, can produce no better proofs and evidences for it, but only that we leave out the Titles and Hallelujah, and that only in the ordinary Service in the publick; when they themselves read it not at all; and when upon the like way of arguing we may charge them with laying aside the whole Scripture, out of which they read not one Chapter for the Information of the People.

He goes on:

3. In the Liturgy the Apocrypha Books are made use of, nay advanced above the Holy Scripture. Strange that a Church should be guilty of this, that in the Articles exclude them out of the Canon; and say That they are not read to establish any Doctrine, only for Instruction of Manners. [a] But let us see how he proves this, not by any Assertion of the Church, but some stretches of Arguing. As,

(1.) They are made equal. For, in the Preface to the Common-Prayer it's said, nothing ordained is to be read but the pure Word of God, or that which is evidently grounded on the same. But is the Apocrypha are so?

A. Here, for improving his Argument, he alters the words of the Preface; and for what is in that, agreeable to the same, he reads evidently grounded on the same, and then triumphs, Is the Apocrypha so? But make it how he will, it's evident from hence, that the Apocrypha is so far from being made equal with Scripture, that there is a plain difference between them; for that to which a thing is agreeable, and in which it's grounded, is above that which is agreeable to it, and grounded upon it. A Plea grounded on the Law, is surely of less Authority than the Law on which it is grounded. The Apocrypha being read, not for establishing any Doctrine, but for informing the Manners; there is nothing what is appointed of that kind to be read, but what is agreeable to the Word of God, and not contrary to it; and so may be read, as well as their Sermons be heard, which can pretend to no more.

(2.) He saith, The Liturgy appoints the Apocrypha to be read as Lessons, just as I find it in the Pope's Service-Book, and in a greater proportion than Scripture; for some have observ'd of 172 Apocryphal Chapters, but are omitted. So that these Books are equalized with the Word of God.

A. But surely he doth not find it in our Service-Book, that the Apocrypha Lessons are read for Canonical Scripture, and declared to be so, as they are in the Pope's Service-Book; being read with us only as Apocrypha, and declared to be so. For he that will look in the Apocrypha-Books in the Pope's Bible, as well as in his Service-Book, will find them mixed with the

[a] Artic. 6.

26. Of the Lawfulness of Worshipping God

Canonical, as Esdra's, the Book of Wisdom, &c. but he that will look for them in our Bibles, will find them by themselves, and Apocrypha in the head of them.

If, as he affirms, the Apocrypha is read in a greater proportion than Scripture, it doth more than equalize, and doth rather advance it above the Scripture, and so belongs to his next Assertion, which he would have done well to have reserved to, to make up the proof he is there wanting in.

As for what he affirms, that the Apocrypha is read in greater proportion than the Scripture; nothing is more false. For,

1. All the Second Lessons throughout the Year are out of the New Testament.

2. All Epistles and Gospels, read on Sunday and Holy-days, are wholly out of Canonical Scripture.

3. All First Lessons on Sundays are out of the Old Testament, and none out of the Apocrypha.

4. On the 33 Holy-days, on the Week-days, there are but 26 Apocrypha First Lessons, whereas there are 40 out of the Canonical Scripture.

5. When the Apocrypha is appointed to be read in Course, it's not clear Two Months for First Lessons, but the Holy Scripture is read all the other Twelve Months, and more.

6. Of the 39 Books of the Old Testament, but are entirely omitted, viz. Chronicles and Canticles; but of the 13 of the Apocrypha, 6 are not read at all.

7. Of the 929 Chapters of the Old Testament, 79 are read in course, and 176 only omitted (the reasons for which generally will appear to the Reader) but out of the 172 Chapters of the Apocrypha, there are (not as he saith 38) 66 omitted, and among them that of Tobit, that he objects against. Whomethinks he that pretends to have read and compared, should have had more value for his own Understanding, than to be beholding to others, and say, Some have observed; for there is nothing like Man's own Observation in Matter of Fact.

3. He saith, The Liturgy advanceth the Apocrypha above the Scripture, by intimating, that they are more edifying, and can be less spared than many portions of the Holy Canon; and by ordering them to be read on the highest Holy-days, and many of them twice, some thrice in one Year.

A. Methinks in such a round Charge as this, that the Liturgy advanceth the Apocrypha above Scripture, he would have had more than an Intimation for his Evidence. He calls it before High-Treason; and surely 'tis very hard to be condemned for it by a bare Intendo; and yet even he fails in his Intimation. For, (1.) If it were true, that the Liturgy ordered the Apocrypha to be read on the Highest Holy-days, and many of them twice or thrice in the Year; it would not follow, that they accounted them more edifying, and to be spared than Scripture; especially when Scripture is read on the Highest Holy-days, and some Portion of it twice or thrice in the Year too.

(2.) It's not true, that it's ordered to be read on the Highest Holy-days: For on the Highest Holy-days, there is nothing but Scripture to be read; such are the days dedicated to our Saviour, as the Nativity, Circumcision, Epiphany, Good-Friday, Resurrection, Ascension, and all the Lords-days.

(3.) He saith, Many of them are read twice, some thrice in the Year. For the twice, it's only 25 Chapters, viz. 7 in Wisdom, and 18 in Ecclesiasticus: And for his thrice, there is none but the 5th. Chapter of Wisdom, which after it had been read on the Conversion of St. Paul, has 17 Verses of it read on All- Saints. But now, as to the Scripture, the whole Testament, except the Revelation, is read over once in the Year in course, besides Epistles, Gospels, and Lessons out of it on Holy-days: And the Testament is read over once, except as before excepted, in course: And many Portions are read also in the Service of Sundays and Holy-days, which amount to above 140 Lessons; and some few have a Course.

28 Of the Lawfulness of Worshipping God

Would any one, that observes this, think such a Writer, a Person of any care, I had almost said of any Conscience; that utters as black Slanders, as Pen or Write, or Mouth can utter, and charges a whole Church with Violating the Word of God, and Adding to it, and Detraſſing from it, and of Advancing Human Writings above it, and yet shall come off without changing a Seventh-day for Sabbath, with leaving out Hallelujah, with Intimations and Falſities, with other Observations, (whilst he pretends to have read and compared them) and what not; and after all charges us with this, for Lessons appointed to be read in the Publick Congregation, when they themselves read none at all; and have no other Translation of Scripture, than what was translated by us, and what they use in Common with us? This is hard usage indeed; and if we should retort upon them in the like way, we should think, if we may judge of the value for Scripture by their Publick Service, that we are none have a less esteem for it than they, that read not one Chapter of it by way of Lesson throughout the Year, as has been before said,

4. He saith, Such things are enjoyed in the Common Prayer-Book, as (to my Conscience) cannot be practised without Sin,

A. But what is this to those that are not obliged to practise them? What is it to Laymen, that Priests are required to give the Holy Communion to all New-married Persons; or to use the Prayer over the Dead; or to put the Ring on in Marriage, or use the Supplice, &c?

But what is this, which cannot be practised without Sin?

Except. 1. Ministers are required to give the Holy Communion to all New-married Persons, whereas Marriage-vows used to be accompanied with such Divertisements, as do not fit them. By this Doctrine, all that may Marry, come to the Lord's Supper, whereas Marriage is a Circumstance, which Men as Men (and not as Christians) have a right unto. So that by this Prescription many come to the Lord's Supper, and drink damnation to themselves.

Ans. 1. If this was required, yet it is not inconsistent with that state, which is rightly called, The Holy Estate of Matrimony; and besides, those Diversifications do not precede but follow.

2. Surely those Persons that are married amongst us, are supposed to be Christians, and not to be married merely as Men.

3. If any eat and drink their own Damnation, it is their own fault; and the danger of it doth not release any of their Duty, or justify their neglect of it.

4. But the Common-Prayer-Book doth not compel them; it saith only, That it is convenient at their Marriage, or at the first opportunity after it.

2. He excepts, When any Man is buried, the Priest must say, Almighty God has taken to himself the Soul of our dear Brother; perhaps the most wicked Wretch on earth. And that his Body is committed to the Ground, in sure and certain hope of a Resurrection to eternal Life; though he did never truly, nor so much as visibly, to the judgment of Charity, repent of his Sins.

Ans. 1. The Office of Burial supposes, that of Visitation of the Sick to go before, where the Minister is appointed to examine, Whether he repent him truly of his Sins? &c.

2. It supposes the Exercise of Discipline, and that such, as he speaks of, have the Censures of the Church exercised on them, which if they be not exercised, we know whom we are to thank for the relaxation of it.

3. However, the Church provides not for extraordinary but ordinary cases, and if an extraordinary case happens, and be notorious, no Rule of this nature then binds.

4. If it be not notorious, it is safer to err on the charitable side.

5. It is not now said, That it is in sure and certain hope of the Resurrection to Eternal Life.

3. He excepts, The putting on the Ring in Marriage, but especially the making that Ceremony to be an essential Matter, is Superstition.

Ans. 1. What Superstition can there be in this, more than in joyning of Hands, both of which are civil

30 Of the Lawfulness of Worshipping God
civil Rites, and fit Declarations of pledging their Troth to each other.

2. How can that be Essential, which is one of the Alterable things meant in the Preface?

3. It is necessary, there should be some Rite used and some Actions by which the Espousal should be solemnized, and why not a Ring as well as joyning Hands? And why not these as well as others? Therefore Bucer calls it, A very fit Ceremony. Script. Angl.
Cens. c. 20.

4. He excepts, Churching Women, and their Offerings is Jewish Superstition.

Ans. 1. Why Jewish? Is there any other Sacrifice than that of Thanksgiving offered? as there was Levit. 12. 6.

2. What Superstition is there more in kneeling down at offering up Thanks to God, than in putting up a Bill. However Bucer saith, This is agreeable to Scripture, c. 24.

5. He excepts, The Observation of Popish Holy-days especially such as are dedicated to Saints, I look upon as highly Superstitious.

Ans. 1. He looks upon them as such, but how far soever his Opinion may pass with some, yet others expect somewhat more to convince them.

2. Why doth he add Popish? Surely he that has read and compared the Popish Liturgy with ours must needs know, that we have no Holy-days for Popish Saints in our Liturgy. As to which, I shall refer our Author to Mr. Perkins on Gal. 4. 10.

6. He excepts, The Surplice is highly Supersti- tious. When holy Vestments were in use among the Jews they had an expresse Command for them. Should they have made a Mitre or Ephod, or other Ecclesiastical Garment of their own heads, they would have sinned greatly? Witness Judg. 8. 27. If then the Church of God had no power to appoint Sacred Vestments, no more has the Church in these days.-----Moreover the Surplice is immediately borrowed from idolatrous Mass-mongers.-----Dr. Abbot (who was no Fanatick) saith, That all Priestly Garments, whereby Ministers are distinguished from the rest of the Church is a special part of the Character of the Beast. The Papists take the Surplice from Jews and Heathens. There were vestments for the Worshipers of Baal, 2 Kings 10. 12. Joseph Jewel saith, The Priests of Isis used to wear Linen Surplices, which thing seems to be derived from them our time. Moreover the greatest part of our Protestant Divines have disliked this Superstitious Garment. So Marten, &c.

Except. 1. His Argument is, the Jews had express command for their Garments, &c.

Ans. 1. Had the Jews no Power to appoint or observe any thing relating to Worship without express command? How then came the Feasts of Purim and Dedication, the Places and Houses of Prayer? Nay, whence came the Alteration of the Posture at the Passover (which our Saviour complied with) contrary to the first Institution? And surely Vestments are much of the same nature with Times and Places, &c.

2. Supposing the Jews might not, what is that to us? Yes, saith he, no more can we. Why so? The Apostle shews we have a liberty, they had not, and may as well do what they could not, as forbear what they might not. They had not a liberty as we, because under a School-master, and of a Temper that ruled it, and whose Service was Typical. And yet notwithstanding this, they had a Liberty, which they on occasion might use, and much more then have we.

Except. 2. The Surplice, he saith, is immediately borrowed from Idolatrous Mass-mongers.

Ans. What is that, if there be no Idolatry borrowed with it? Do we use it to sanctify Holy-water, Bells, &c.

2. As for his Quotation from Dr. Abbot, it is a gross Mistake at least; all he saith is, That the Buyers and Sellers, Rev. 13. 16. are Bishops, the Priests, and Monks, who expose to sale Masses and Indulgences, &c. that bind themselves by Oath to the Bishop of Rome, and in testimony of it, are divided from the rest of the Church by Rites, as, Unctions, Tonsures, Garments. Where he speaks of Garments in general, and no more of Surplices than than Gowns; and of Garments they ordinarily wear such as belong to Monastick Orders, &c. But if he had spoke of all Garments that distinguish the Clergy from the Laity, Dr. Abbot had been in that a Peccator, and not Dr. Abbot, who himself wore such Garments, and surely did not think by that, he had a special Character of the Beast upon him.

What he quotes from Bishop Jewel, is not in the place (if any where) he refers to; neither in the English nor Latin Volume.

Except. 3. The Papists take the Surplice from Jews and Heathens; and for this latter, quotes the Priests of Baal.

Ans. 1. But the Text doth not say, they were any more White, than Blue or Black; and he might as well have proved our Gowns we ordinarily wear, or others prove their Cloaks to be such, as well as to prove our Surplices Heathenish from that Text.

4. He saith, The greatest part of our Protestants do not like it.

Ans. 1. What saith he to the Lutherans, who all are of the like? Are they not Protestants?

2. Do any he names dislike it so, as to think it unlawful?

3. Do they dislike it so, as to make a Schism in the Church; or for it separate from a Church?

I am certain, those he produces do declare the contrary. Thus Pet. Mart. Epist. Amico & Hoopero, & Beza Epist. Grindallo. Zanchy Confes. c. 25. §. 30. Hemingius in 4 Leg. Decal. §. 29. &c. Enchir. tit. Adiaph. c. 1. Polanus in Ezek. 44. And Zanchy chuses the Linen before the Woollen Garment for Divine Offices, as a sign of Innocence and Holiness, de Redempt. c. 16. could much enlarge the Catalogue of such Testimonies, if it were necessary.

So little did these Learned Men think Mr. Nichol's Argument of any force, which our Author propounds viz. 'That all Vestments appropriated to the Worship of God, and appointed for the Signification of Sacramental Duties, by the Will of Man, are unlawful.' But the Surplice is so. This our Author saith

Not easy to be answered: But if it be to be answered, no matter whether it's not easy in his Opinion. From hence arise two Questions.

Qu. 1. Whether it's unlawful to use any thing appropriated to the Worship of God by the Will of Man?

Qu. 2. Whether it's unlawful to use any thing in the Worship of God, that is appointed for the signification of Spiritual Duties by the Will of Man?

By the first it's unlawful for Men to appropriate Places, or Times, or Postures to the Worship of God. And so it's necessary, to avoid this Superstition, to make all the Meeting-places to be Houses of Merchandise, and to be equally divided between Religious and Common Uses. By the 2d. any thing that has such a Signification applied to it, is made unlawful, by Vertue of such Signification, and which without such Signification would have been lawful. So a surplice would have been a lawful Garment, if not appropriated, and without Signification; and might have been in its self worn as well as a Cloak, since Custom and Use only makes the difference; but appropriate it, and clap a Signification upon it, it's unlawful: And so a Cloak may be turned out of Service by the same way. So it's in Posture, Kneeling and Standing are indifferent; but once appropriate kneeling to Prayer, and make it significative, and it be a Posture of Reverence, and it becomes unlawful. And so without end. So much for Mr. Nichols's Argument, and it's Difficulty.

7. Come we now to the Cross, The greatest Devil amongst all the Idols of Rome; as he tells us Mr. Hooker sheweth.

He saith, 1. The first users of it were the Hereticks, Valentinius and Montanus.

Ans. That seems hard, when those that wrote against them used it, as Origen, Irenaeus, Tertullian, and Epiphanius did against the former; and several others against the latter. We find it as ancient as Tertullian, Cyprian, &c.

34 Of the Lawfulness of Worshipping God

2. He saith, Mr. Parker prooveth it a sin against all the Commandments, and a breach of the Letter of the second: for Men to appoint a Religious Ceremony, is a direct violation of the second Commandment, which forbids all human Inventions in Divine Worship, as any part thereof.

Ans. There is a way of proving too much, and that any one that reads Mr. Parker will soon perceive he doth: And of this I take this Instance of the second Commandment to be one, of the Letter of which the Author saith, the Cross is a Breach. Now the Letter of that Command respects two things, 1. Not to make any Graven Image for Religious Worship. 2. Not to bow down to any such Object. Now the Cross used in Baptism is an Aerial Cross as he calls it; and where is the Object or the Worship? But our Author goes on to prove it after the manner; For Men to appoint, &c. Here we grant the Proposition to be true, because God only is to appoint his own Worship; and so it is not in the power of Man to appoint any part of it: But now if there may be Ceremonies us'd in Religious Worship, and yet not be part of Divine Worship, then they are no such human Inventions as are forbidden; and no direct or indirect violation of the second Commandment. Therefore it remains upon him to prove the Cross a part of Divine Worship: For we say it is only an adjunct, and is no more a part of Worship, than the striking of the Blood upon the Door-posts was (to make use of Zepperus his Similitude) or Sitting or Kneeling at the Sacrament.

3. He saith, The Arguments which are brought against the use of Oyl, Cream, Salt, Spittle in Baptism (practised by the Papists) hold as well against the Cross.

Ans. This I deny; for the Scripture speaks honourably of the Cross of Christ, which this refers to, not at all of the rest. Again, the Cross was traduced and reproached by the Heathens, which gave occasion to the use of it, and so were not the rest. So that it was used with reason; those without it.

His Instance of the Gallows looks so prophane, that I shall rather pass it by, than correct it.

4. He saith, The Papists adore the Cross, and it's an Idol, &c.

Ans. But do they adore the Aerial Cross? But what is their Adoration (if it were) to us, that do not adore it?

5. This hath been testified against by Zegeдинus, Lep- perus (it should be Zepperus) Goulartius, &c.

Ans. The Lutheran Churches use it. See Hewin- gius, &c. Bucer accounts it neither indecent, nor unprofitable, but a Ceremony of much simplicity, and of present admo- nition of the Cross of Christ, Script. Angl. Censur. c. 12. And generally they account it lawful, and not a suffici- ent reason for separation; but to be used, so it be with- out Superstition. So Goulart. in Cypr. lib. ad Demet. c. 9.

8. His last Instance of Superstition is Kneeling at the Sacrament. Let us consider what he hath to say against it.

1. He saith, Men pretend in it Reverence to Christ; but Christ himself was personally present, when his Disciples took of the Lord's Supper; yet they did not kneel, but used the Table-gesture then customary among the Jews.

A. 1. How is he certain the Disciples did not kneel, but us'd the customary Posture in receiving? For the Jews in the Passover changed Postures, and did not throughout keep to that of discumbency. See Dr. Lightfoot.

2. The Question is not what they did, but what may lawfully be done: and then the Question is, Whether Kneeling be unlawful?

3. They themselves no more observe our Sa- viour's Posture, than the Jews did observe the Po- sture required at the first Institution of the Passover. Our Author words it cautiously, when he saith the Disciples used the Table-gesture then customary; for he well knew it was not sitting, but leaning, or ly- ing along, and that they used this by way of Signi- fication.

4. If the Table be the Rule to guide us, then to sit on our Hats is suitable, as he knows who reasons.

2. He saith, Good and Wise men have chosen great suf- ferings, rather than comply with this Invention.

36 Of the Lawfulness of Worshipping God

Ans. And there were Good and Wise men that compiled the Liturgy, and used and enjoined this Posture; which is an Argument he seeks to overthrow, p. 16. And as Good and Wise men have allowed and approved it, and thought it by no means allowable to separate and break Communion for it. Such as P. Martyr, Zanchy, Beza, Zepperus, &c. Baines, Noyes, Ames, Cartwright, &c.

3. In Primitive times Christians did not kneel in the participation of the Eucharist.

Ans. 1. It's certain they did not sit, for they had no Notion at all of a Table-gesture, as appears by the use of the Word Altar, and that they counted that a Posture of irreverence.

2. If they stood (as he saith) on the Lord's-days, their standing was a Posture of Adoration, to be sure, when they received: So St. Cyril expressly, Catech. 5.

3. It's probable that on other days, when not obliged to stand, that they kneeled; and since they received every day, on six days they kneel'd: so Just. Mart. Resp. ad Quæst. 115. and that more especially, because they had a Prayer at receiving as we have.

4. He saith, It was enjoined by Pope Honorius, being fitted to the Idolatry of Transubstantiation, &c.

Ans. This is a Mistake: Honorius did first indeed decree Adoration to the Host, but not kneeling at it: For that is a Posture no where enjoined in the Church of Rome; and some of them say, it ought to be received standing; but which way, whether sitting, standing, or lying, or kneeling, is not material, say [a] others, as the Pope himself ordinarily receive sitting, unless he celebrates; and then, as all Priests then do, he receives standing. And all adore not at the receiving, but at the elevation of the Host.

5. He saith, That Religious Worship, which is before a Creature, and with respect to it, having no allowance from God, is against the Commandment; but so is Kneeling before the Bread and Wine.

Ans. 1. I question whether God ever allow'd any Religious Worship before a Creature, and with respect to a Creature; for that is Idolatry, and no allowance from God, can be supposed to justify or require Idolatry.

2. I deny that there is any Religious Worship with respect to the Bread and Wine: For, that, with our Rubrick, were Idolatry to be abhorred of all faithful Christians. But it's only, as it's there said, a signification of our humble and grateful acknowledgments of the Benefits of Christ therein given to all worthy receivers.

3. He draws a Conclusion from the whole, The English Liturgy is very Corrupt; now to offer so the Lord Corrupt thing is evil, Mal. 2. 13.

Ans. A corrupt thing there, is what is plainly prohibited: Now let him prove the things before reputed to be such. As for Example, that kneeling is forbidden. As for that place in Malachi, I leave to perusal the Letter of the Ministers of Old-England, whose in New-England, p. 14 where that is explained.

CHAP. III.

Publick Liturgies of humane Composure are an Innovation and Deviation from Primitive Antiquity: And again, Set Forms of Prayer devised by Men are an Innovation.

FOR this he offers several Arguments.

1. Saith he, Had a Liturgy been needful for the edification of the Church, undoubtedly Christ, or Apostles by his direction, would have composed one, if none of them ever did. And therefore these Men, who take upon them to compose and impose a Liturgy on the Church, assume to themselves more than Apostolical power.

Ans. I deny his Consequence: For though our Saviour

38 Of the Lawfulness of Worshipping God

Saviour and his Apostles did, declared and left things essential to a Church, yet there were many things needful to the edification of the Church in future Ages that were not expressly provided for. Our Saviour told the Apostles, that it should be given them in that hour what they should speak; and they spake Languages by present Infusion; and so were not obliged to think before, or study, or learn a Language; and this was with relation to the present condition of the Church in those times. And there are no directions for after Ages to learn Languages, &c. So there was a miraculous gift of Prayer in the Apostolical times (as St. Chrysostom observes, Hom. 14. in Rom. 8.) and no express Directions given about it, when that Gift should cease (as he saith it did) and when by the cessation of it, Forms would be necessary. Thus saith Orsellus (Thef. Salmar. Part. 3.) As soon as miraculous Gifts ceased, and Hereticks began to trouble the Church, there was a necessity for Liturgies. And therefore Mr. Ball saith, The Christian Churches for the space of 1400 Years at least, if not from the Apostles time have had their stinted Liturgies. Trial. p. 96, &c. Letter of Min. of Old England, l. 66, &c.

But this our Author denies, and calls it an Innovation.

And saith, 2. The Liturgies father'd on the Apostles and the ancient Writers (call'd Fathers) Learned Men have evinc'd to be spurious.

Ans. 1. It's granted, that those father'd on the Apostles were so; but tho' not of the Apostles Composition, yet many of the Prayers in them were very antient, and the main of that call'd St. James's, was used in the Church at Jerusalem, as Dr. Comber [Original and use of Liturgies, p. 97.] in Answer to Clark has shew'd from Cyril.

2. It's certain there was a Liturgy composed by St. Chrysostom and Basil; and a great part of what is so call'd, was certainly theirs; as the above-said Author has shew'd, p. 167. 172, 209. and of this Mr. were [a] Mornay and [b] Rivet.

[a] Of the Mass, l. 1. c. 6. [b] Cens. 9, 10.

3. The least that can be observed from these Books, that when those Books were writ, then Liturgies were in use; so [a] Daille; We deny not but many of these Liturgies are ancient, and written about the beginning of the fourth Century, tho' they were corrupted by Additions and Alterations at several times after their first original.

3. He would prove from an obscure Passage in Justin Martyr and Tertullian, that there was no Book of Prayer used by Christians 200 Years after Christ.

Ans. The Passage in Justin Martyr is, εὐχαριστίας καὶ ὁμιλίας ὅντιν ὁ δὲ θεὸς ἀνατίθηται. Which our Author is forced to corrupt, and add to, before he can work to his purpose; for thus he translates it, according as length and utterance was afforded to him from Heaven: whereas word for word it is, in like manner be [the President] offereth up Prayers to him [God] as he has power, that is, as fervently as he could: and so the same Phrase a little before. Of this see Dr. Comber, 33, &c. And as little does the Passage in Tertullian make for his purpose, which is, That the Christians prayed, Sine Monitore quia de pectore; which surely relates not to the praying extempore: for what testimony was that of their Loyalty, more than if they prayed by a Form? But his plain meaning is, they needed no Prompter (as the Heathens) but prayed heartily for the Emperors, &c. as their Offices shew. They had no need of any to admonish them, or to require it of them; for this they did, and always did out of affection, and from a sense of their duty.

4. He saith, "That there was no Liturgy in some Churches, or in general use in the Church, for above 400 Years, is manifest from Socrates; who saith, there were scarcely two Christians found who used the same words in Prayer, l. 5. c. 21.

Ans. 1. Here he mistakes, if not perverts again: 1. Socrates doth not say two Christians, but two Churches. 2. He doth not say, they used the same words, but the same Manner.

[a] De cultu. Lat. l. 3. c. 13.

40 Of the Lawfulness of Worshipping God

2. The Words of Socrates do not infer what would have; for he saith, In Summ among all Sects shall scarcely find two Churches agreeing in the manner of Prayer: Which refers not to the Words, but the Way as before described, viz. lighting up Candles, &c.

3. Supposing it was to be understood of the Word what's that to Extempore Prayer? For different Churches may not have the same Words, when they may have Forms. The Historian's meaning That the Churches had different Forms of Prayer as well as different Rites: So (a) Mornay speaking of the Liturgies of the Greek and Latin Churches; in substance the Service of these Churches do agree, we must not think there was one and the same Prescribed Form observed, and kept in them all.

5. He saith, some plead, that in the Jewish Church of old there were forms of Prayers, besides those of Divine Inspiration; but they are late Compositions.

Ans. 1. If there were Forms of old in the Jewish Church of Divine Inspiration, and those Forms to be used (as the Scripture shews) then it shews that Forms may lawfully be used.

2. That the Jews had set Forms of Human Composition of ancient times, Learned Men agree: (b) Mornay shews; and that the First Christians followed themselves after this manner of Service.

2. Nay, Learned Men observe, That Forms were used in our Saviour's time; and yet he so far from condemning them, that he attended their Service and composed a Form like to theirs. So (c) De Witt Lightfoot.

So that we see he has failed throughout in his attempt of proving Liturgies and Set-forms an Innovation. But I can tell what is an Innovation; and that is, To hold Liturgies unlawful, and that it is unlawful to be present at, or to partake in it.

(a) Mas. l. 1. c. 6. (b) So Mornay Mas. l. 1. p. 157, 158. (c) Vol. 1, 157, 158.

CHAP. IV.

's an Apostacy in this Age of Light, to countenance or comply with the Common-Prayer-Book Worship.

UPON this his chief Topick is:

1. That Good and Learned Men have born Witness against the Corruptions of the English Liturgy, and chose to suffer rather than comply with it.

Ans. 1. There have been as good and Learned men that have shewed those not to be Corruptions:

2. There have been several of his Learned and Good Men, who he saith, chose rather to suffer, than by complying with the Liturgy, that have shewed those corruptions not to be a sufficient reason for Separation: So Mr. Bradshaw, Mr. Nichols, &c.

3. They were so far from refusing Communion for them, that the Old Nonconformists ordinarily and commonly used the Common-Prayer-Book in their publick Ministations; as Mr. Ball, one of them, declares, Tryal, 121, 155.

4. All of them testified against the Brownists, and against a Separation from the Church. It was (saith Baxter) the Parish-Churches that had the Liturgy, and Mr. Jacob the Father of the Congregational Party refused for Communion with. The same I may say of Mr. Bradshaw, Dr. Ames, and other Nonconformists, whom the Congregational Brethren think more favourable to their way.

In the close, our Author offers some farther Objections from the false and corrupt Doctrine he pretends to be in the Liturgy.

As, that it's certain by God's Word, that Children baptized, dying before they commit actual sin, are undoubtedly saved: This, saith he, savours of Pelagianism.

Ans. I don't understand the falseness, or Pelagianism of it. It's certain by God's Word, that of such is the

42. Of the Lawfulness of Worshipping God

the Kingdom of God, and so they must be capable of it; it must be upon Gospel terms; but what terms they are capable of but Baptism, I understand not.

2. That there are two Sacraments necessary to Salvation which implies a double Error, viz. That the Sacraments are necessary to Salvation; and that there are more Sacraments of the New-Testament than two.

Ans. I don't see wherein is the first Error, if he had truly represented it; for it's said in the Catechism two Sacraments generally necessary; that is, that there are a Duty belonging to all Persons that are capable of it; where there are Persons to baptize, and a Congregation to communicate with; and therefore it is not said absolutely, but generally necessary.

As for the latter, a Sacrament is not a Scriptural word, but a Term of Art, and so hath been variously used and applied; and therefore to set out what it means, the Church has defined what a Sacrament is, and then shewed there are but two: and so this Phrase is used to distinguish it from any other so called; and that then none but these two are generally necessary to all Christians. See Article 25.

3. The Book saith, Some Sins are deadly, as if the Popes distinction of sins into Mortal and Venial, were a sound distinction.

Ans. How can that be, when Fornication, which is called Deadly in the Liturgy, is ordinarily accounted a Venial Sin in the Church of Rome; and when the Distinction between Mortal and Venial (as used in the Church of Rome) is so contrary to the Doctrine of the Church of England? It is plain, that our Church means thereby no other than heinous. But of this Distinction, and the use of it in sano sensu among Protestants, I refer him to Rob. Bunning de peccato Mortali & veniali, Par. 1. §. 11.

4. It is said, Christ has redeemed all Mankind.

Ans. The Scripture saith, God will have all Men saved; and that Christ died for all, &c.

2. He argues farther, That A stinied Liturgy, is opposite to the Spirit of Prayer, Eph. 6. 18.

Ans. 1. If so, then the Spirit will not commuate it self in a Liturgy, or stinted Form of Prayer, contrary to the sense of all sober Divines. So Dr.

(a) Owen: Supposing, saith he, those who make use of, and plead for Forms of Prayer, especially in publick, do in due manner prepare themselves for it by holy Meditation, &c. I do not judge, that there is any such evil in them, as that God will not communicate his Spirit to any in the use of them.

2. If so, then almost all Churches in the World for these 100 years, at least, to this day (as Mr. (b) Baxter allows) have been without the Spirit of Prayer.

3. If so, then we cannot lawfully communicate in, with a stinted Liturgy, which has yet been approved of all Reformed Churches, as Mr. (c) Ball saith; and Mr. Cotton saith it's lawful to embrace communion with Churches where such Forms in Publick worship are in use.

4. As for Eph. 6. 18. that we are to pray with all prayer; why is that not possible by a Liturgy, when there are in it Supplications, Prayers, and giving of thanks?

5. He lets pass the Arguments from the mischief of a prescript Liturgy, and so will I pass what follows from the trivial, unintelligible, and dirty Reflections on it. For he knows we can match his Fidler, with stories of some of those that have been eminent the other way, and could argue upon the sinfulness of premeditated and conceived Prayer.

6. He saith, Mr. Cotton speaketh weightily, in saying, It is unlawful to bring ordinarily any other Book into Publick Worship of God, besides the Book of God.

Answer. I know no difference between Reading and citing in this case; and I have heard Mr. (d) Cotton read a Form of Prayer in the Pulpit. If he did not, all the Nonconformists in former times did, as far as ever I could learn.

To close all: He undertakes to answer an Obedi-

Discourse of Prayer, p. 31. (b) Sacrileg. desert. p. 8. &c. (c) Apol. c. 13. (d) See Clark's Collection of sermons, p. 38.

44 Of the Lawfulness of Worshipping God.

on, That Good Men were left the first Collectors and Publishers of the Liturgy, and died Martyrs.

This he endeavours to answer; and yet when it to serve his own Cause, it is a considerable Argument. Thus saith he before, The corruptions of the Liturgy have been born witness against by good Men; as his Father, a Holy Man, suffered much for his Nonconformity, and what not. Now surely, if this sort of going is good for them, it is good for us.

But he replies further:

1. All Persons employed in it, were not good Men, as Dr. Bishop of Chichester. He was a dissembling Hypocrite, pretending to be a Protestant, but afterwards shewed himself a Papist.

Ans. Here he betrays gross Ignorance, or something worse. For tho' Day was one of the 18 Bishops employed for compiling the Service-Book at first, A. 1548. yet at that time he was for Transubstantiation (a) Solitary Masses, and against having the Service in the Vulgar Tongue.

And when the next Review was, which was 1562, when Granmer wrote to Bucer about it, it does not appear that Day was concerned; nay, rather that he was against it, for he refused to set his hand to the Book before it was enacted by a Law; and was afterwards turned out of his Bishoprick, and deprived. But to say all in a word; what was this dissembling (b) hypocrite to those who were truly Pious Men, and acted faithfully according to the Light they had? as our Author acknowledgeth.

2. He saith, Good Men changed their Minds, as did Ridley and Granmer.

Ans. Both gross Mistakes. For Archbishop Cranmer took upon him to defend the Common-Prayer Ministrations of the Sacraments, and other Rites and Ceremonies, (c) when in Prison.

And Bishop Ridley, a little before his Martyrdom in a Letter to his Friend, saith, (d) This Church

(a) Burnet's Ref. P. 2, p. 62. and N. 25. (b) Ibid.
(c) Fox's Acts and Mon. fol. 1465. (d) Ibid. Vol. 2, p.

ate the whole Divine Service; all Common and Publick Prayers, framed to the true vein of Holy Scripture.

And again, after his Condemnation, writing an Answer to Grindal, concerning Knox's peremptory Exceptions against the Service-Book; (a) I grant, saith he, a Man (as he is) of Wit and Learning, may find apparent reasons; yet I suppose he cannot soundly by the Word of God so disprove any thing in it.

2. He saith, Others were much troubled at the Service-Book; as Bishop Hooper, and Mr. Rogers at home; and Calvin, Bucer, Martyr, Bullinger, &c. abroad. So Alasco and Knox, and the first Reformers in Scotland.

Ans. As for Hooper's dissatisfaction, it was not at the Liturgy, but the Episcopal Vestments; (b) in which also he at last complied.

And as for Bucer's Mind, and Pet. Martyr's, the English Reader will find it in the History of the Reformation, p. 154, 155. And (c) Calvin to the English Exiles at Frankfurt, declares against a rigorous Opposition, and was pleased that he retained moderation in this Case.

As for (d) Alasco and Knox, whatever they objected against the Liturgy, yet both had their Publick Offices, and Forms of Prayer.

4. He saith, In Queen Elizabeth's time the Bishops made the Common-Prayer-Book in several things worse, and more intolerable, than it was in the days of King Edward VI.

A. 1. And I hope he will confess, in many things better.

2. Why those Prayers, &c. were left out, he may see in the History of the Reformation, p. 77, 170, 390. The reason of which has been before justified.

3. There could be no great alteration to the worse, if what he mentions was all; and however was nothing to us, when the Rubrick of the Communion is restored.

(a) Vide Dr. Taylor. Fox Mart. p. 1521. (b) Vide Burnet, p. 125, &c. 166. (c) Epist. 200, 206, and 228. (d) That of Alasco printed An. 1550. And that of Knox, at Middleburgh 1594.

And

46 Of the Lawfulness of Worshipping God

And now, that he may end as he begun, as he would have our Service-Book come from Popery, so he will have it, That time will discover, that some who pretend Zeal for the Common-Prayer-Book, are carrying on a design for Rome.

And time has discovered, that some of those who pretended Zeal against the Common-Prayer, carried on a design for Rome, and helped them forward in it, stood as it were Neuters; and that the Liturgy has not so much a tendency that way, as Separation.

The World saw it in the late Reign of a Popish Prince, and found that the Church, that uses Liturgy, was a Bulwark against Popery; and when those that were against the Liturgy, either basely complied, fawn'd upon the Government, or cowardly were silent.

THE Second Question.

Qu. 2. What Reason have you to scruple the lawfulness of Laying the Hand on the Book, and Kissing the Book in Swearing.

To this he answers.

1. We do not find in the Scripture the Lord's Servants were wont to swear after this manner; we read of lifting up the hand, &c. which is a natural sign of Worship.

Ans. 1. We find in Scripture, that they were wont to put the hand under the Thigh in swearing: And thus the same Abraham that lift up his hand, required his Servant to swear, by putting his hand under his Thigh. Gen. 24. 2. and so Jacob made his Son Joseph to use the same Ceremony when he swore, Gen. 47. 29. Now

2. Since we find different Rites used, it is a sign that practice of the Lord's Servants is to be no Rule to us in this matter; but that we are to govern ourselves by the Custom of the place where, and the People among whom we live, if there be nothing in it self unlawful.

3. He saith, and seems to allow it, That the Romans of old, and Italians and Spaniards, use to lift up the Finger when they swear solemnly. Now I conceive lifting up the Finger is no natural Sign of Worship.

ship. And if it had any signification, I know no reason, why the Germans may not lift up three Fingers; to intimate they invoke the Sacred Trinity, which he saith, he cannot justify. Nor why we may not lay the Hand upon, and kiss the Book, in token of Belief of it, and of our Acting according to it, and of our being judged according to it.

For the Word of God doth not prescribe in such Cases.

2. He answers, Laying the Hand on the Book is a symbolizing with Popish Idolaters, and Superstitious Jews.

Ans. 1. It is not a symbolizing with Papists as such; since there are Papists that use other Ceremonies in swearing, as he saith, The Italians, Spaniards, and Germans do: And therefore if this be a Reason, as we must not lift up the Fingers, because they do so; so we must not lift up the Hand, because that is not to be done, but we must lift up the Finger too.

2. If it was customary among the Jews to produce the Law in giving an Oath, I see no reason to condemn it; and so know no hurt to observe it. They used also to adjure Persons, and our Saviour readily answers to it, when thus called upon, Matth. 26. 63.

3. He replies, Kissing, in a Religious way, is a gesture of Adoration. And he closes it, This is clearly to worship a Book; and so to give a Creature that Honour which is due to God alone. And before he saith, So help you and the Contents of this Book; is not much better, than when the Papists say, So help me God, and these Holy Evangelists, which is gross Idolatry.

Ans. The Kissing may be a token of Adoration, when the thing is an Object of Adoration is acknowledged. But it is not a token of Adoration, when the thing kissed is not an Object of Adoration. Thus kissing the Calves, and an Image, is an Act of Adoration, because the Object is an Object of Adoration; but Kissing the Book is not, because a Book is no Object of Adoration.

If it be asked, Why then is the Book kissed? I answer, It is in token of Reverence, as it is the Book of God; and which, if I so kiss every time I read it, it, it is surely far from being Idolatry. And that it is so, appears from what follows, So help me God and the Contents of this Book: which is in different ways, God by his Grace, and the Contents of this Book by their Instruction; the one as the Efficient the other as the Instrumental Cause. Thus without doubt it is meant in the old Form, So help me God, and these holy Evangelists; that is, the Gospel wrote by them; as the Name of Moses is given in Scripture to his Writings. So that in this sense it is neither Idolatry in them, nor any thing like it in us: And we may as lawfully kiss the Book, as lift up the Hand since neither of them are prohibited by God's Law and so being indifferent in themselves, we may act as the case requires.

A Postscript.

MR. Keith having printed a Sermon, which he preached at Boston in New-England; Mr. crease Maier one of the Ministers there, published some Remarks upon it.

In which, §. 7. He objects against the 7th Rule of Mr. K. viz. That 'Set Forms of Prayers and Thanksgiving, where the People pray vocally with their Minister, are a Duty under the New Testament as the Old.

In Opposition to this Mr. M. replies, That it is our Opinion, that all Forms are unlawful. A late Virulent Author has slanderously reported that to be the Opinion of him that wrote A Brief Discourse concerning the Lawfulness of Common-Prayer-Worship. But as he has in many other Particulars dealt very falsely and dishonestly, so in that respect of the Discourser's Judgment, pretended Answerer has wronged him. Indeed we look upon the Imposition of Terms as sinful, but not all use of them were much better for Men, that have not the Gift of Prophecy, to use a Form in their Families than not to pray at all.

The Anonymous Tract was published first above ten years ago; and hath lain so long undisturbed, tho' hath been reprinted several times: And now this Author thinks he hath acquitted himself well by sending a few hard Words upon it, and without making good one tittle of it.

But why doth he call the Author Anonymous? when he copies after the Discourser, who appears under no other Title, than that of a Reverend and Learned Divine, which how well soever he may deserve, yet I suppose was not intended to be appropriated to one alone; if there were no more, than he that had a Right to Why again, doth he call him Virulent? when if so it were, he has the Learned and Reverend for his Comptroller, who bestows no better a Character upon our Church, (which is the Established Order of our Church, and the National Religion) (than at it's Heathenish, Jewish and Popish, Idolatrous and Ridiculous: That it Violates the Word P. 4, 5, 6, 7.

God by obliterating, adding, and sacrilegiously stealing from it: And advances the Apocrypha as

But after all I am apt to think, he cannot justly charge the aforesaid Tract with any such Reflections, if he can, I will undertake that that Author shall readily ask his Pardon for it.

He saith, that Anonymous Author hath in many Particulars dealt very falsely and disingeniously with his Adversary; but particularly in the Opinion he ascribes to him of holding all Forms unlawful.

It is hardly worth the while to reply to this; but if we may judge of the many Particulars in reserve to this, I doubt the Charge would remain in its full force. For if this Author be pleas'd to review the Book, he may observe, that all the Forms, there spoken of, is to be understood of the Forms in Dispute, and that are Forms used in publick Congregations: such like to the Title of a Book wrote (as he saith, p. 11. y by Mr. Cotton, against set Forms of Prayer, I supposed (for I never saw the Book); not against all Forms, though the Word would carry it so, but against such as Common-Prayer-Worship.

As for the Rule of Mr. K. called the Question Mr. M. I need not to interpose in the Defence of that Author being well able of himself to maintain. But being this is in a Paragraph by it self, and tended more particularly against the Anonymous Author; I shall sum up briefly the Case before us, putting a few Questions, &c.

Q. 1. Whether Forms of Prayer as Forms are lawful to be used or communicated with or no?

A. That he dares not to say.

(1.) For, saith he, it is to be understood not of Prayers, since praising in Metre cannot be without a Form.

2. Not of Family-Prayer: It being much better Men, that have not the gift of Prayer, to use a Form in Family, than not to pray at all.

Q. 2. Were Forms never used in the Service of God?

A. That is not to be affirmed. For saith Mr.

When the Prophets say, Take mine words, and say, Receive us graciously, the Ministers of the Lord should say, thy People. i. e. Whoever among them did with penitent heart pray for Mercy, observed what was enjoined, whether they made use of those very words or no?

So that they might, if they thought fit, use very Words.

And he adds, that Mr. Boyse has well shewed That most of the Prayers, both private and publick recorded in the Old Testament, are conceived in free Prayer.

So that allowing what Mr. Boyse saith, and he Mr. Boyse (which yet we do not) yet the Word implies that there were Forms then in use, and if not, or if he could have proved the contrary might as easily have said, All the Prayers, both private and publick recorded in the Old Testaare conceived or free Prayer; but that he could not say with Truth or a good Conscience.

So that we may safely affirm, that Forms of Prayer were in use amongst the Jews.

Q. 3. Were Forms of Prayer in Divine Worship ever forbidden in the Old or New Testament?

Ans. That I do not see he has in the least adventured to affirm.

Qu. 4. Are Forms of Prayers of Humane Composure lawful to be used in Divine Worship? This he questions.

A. It may be asked, Whether Prayers of Humane Composure may be used, though free and not premeditated? Free Prayers are a Composure, and of humane Invention, and if they are lawful to be used, tho' not of Divine Inspiration; then certainly Forms are so. And he that prays ex tempore, can pretend no more to Divine Inspiration, than he that prays by a Form. 1 Cor. 14. 15.

Q. 5. Is it lawful to use or joyn with a Form, that is imposed? he saith not, We look (saith he) upon the Imposition of Terms as sinful.

A. If by Imposition he means the Act of the Imposer, that is not the Purpose: If he thereby means the joyning with the Thing imposed, that is to the purpose but not true.

The Question in short must be resolved into this Proposition, That Forms of Prayer in themselves lawful, if imposed by lawful Authority, become unlawful, by Vertue of that Imposition. If not imposed it is lawful, but if imposed, it ceases to be lawful, till it returns to its former Liberty, and then it is lawful again.

I think this needs no Reply, for it confutes it self.

Qu. 6. Is it lawful to joyn in Common-Prayer Worship?

Ans. I refer him for this to the Anonymous Author, which I may say remains unanswered.
